

author@zoramarie.com
zoramarie.com

Advertisement

Heart in the Highlands

by Zora Marie

Last summer I went away to the United Kingdom, thinking England was the place that called my name. Little did I know, it was the bagpipes and the highlands that sang to me.

I had forgotten how much I love open spaces, being able to see out across the land. It was here that I hiked up the hills, took a boat across the lochs, and let my soul meander.

While the people there work hard, they seem to seek a simple life. The way they live is something akin to my past. You work hard for what you have, yet you help and respect your neighbors.

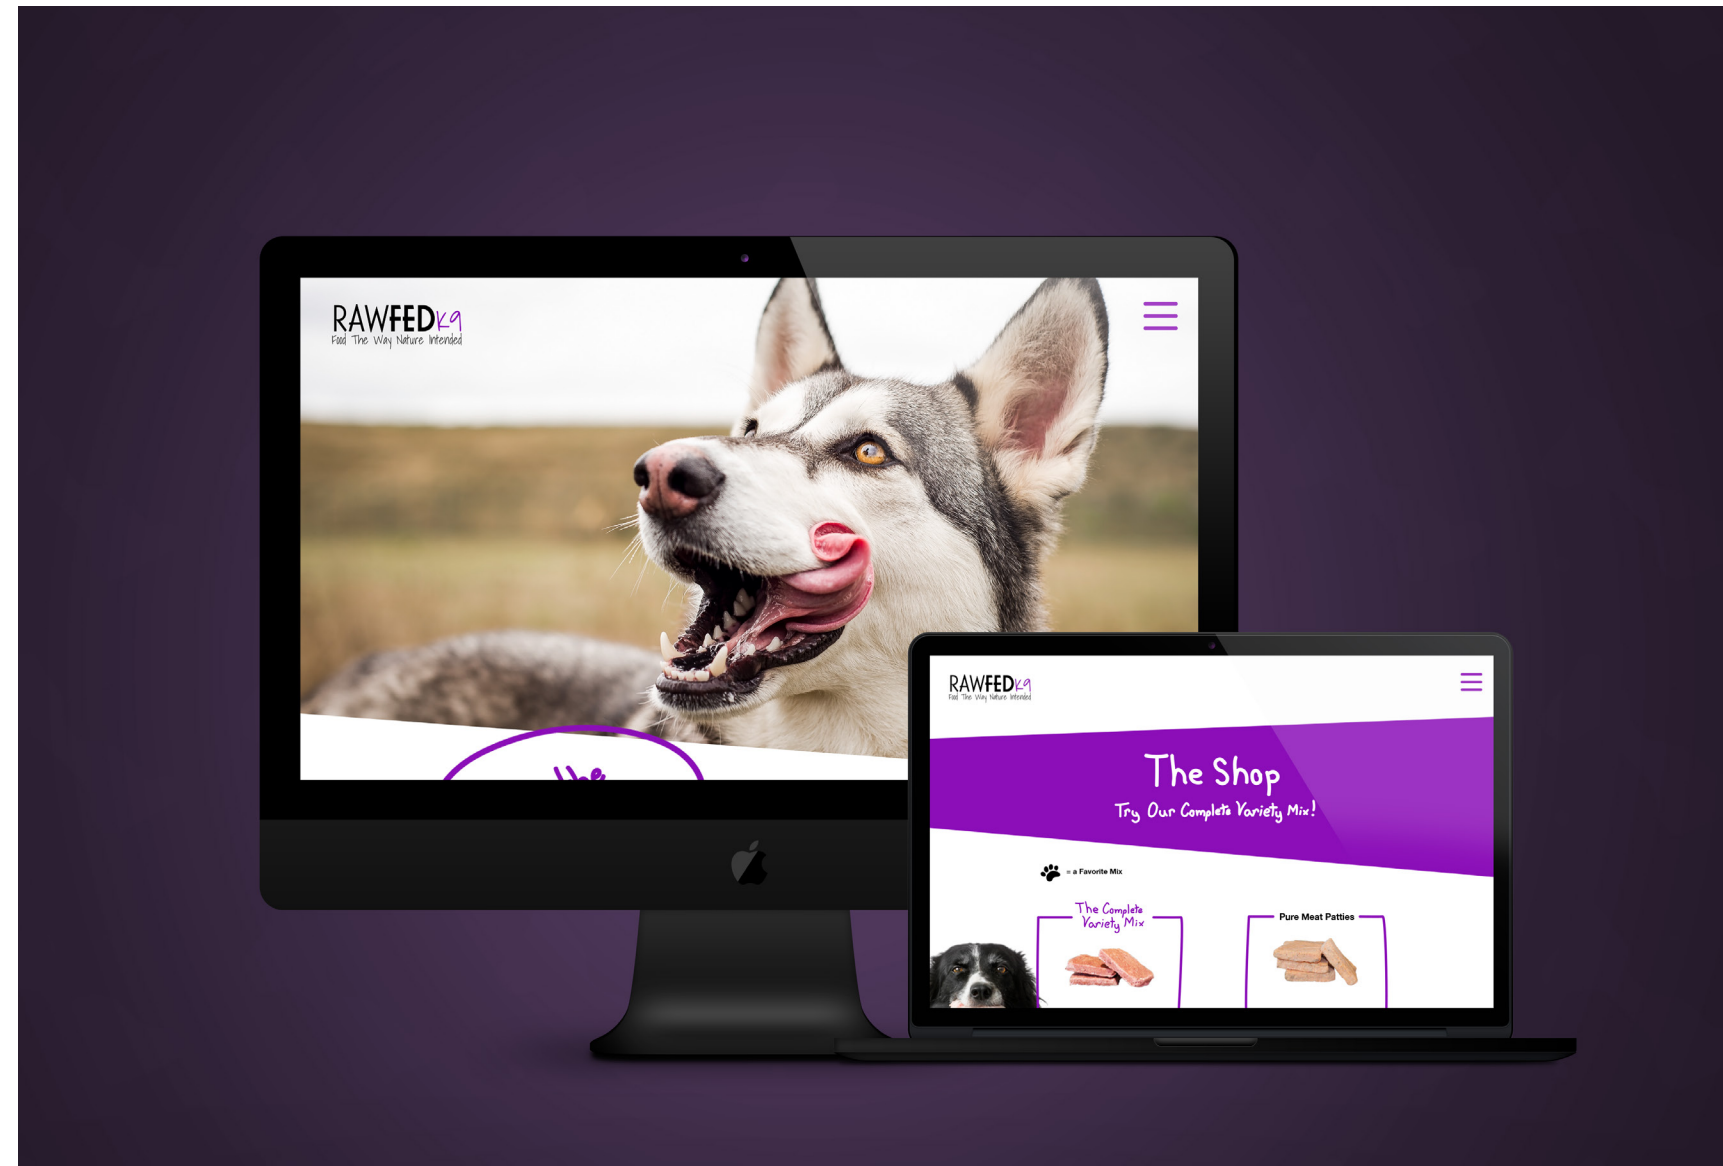

The winters are harsh, yet the summers are calm. The abrasive nature of the winter weeds out the weak and breeds a different kind of community. A community where helping one another is commonplace.

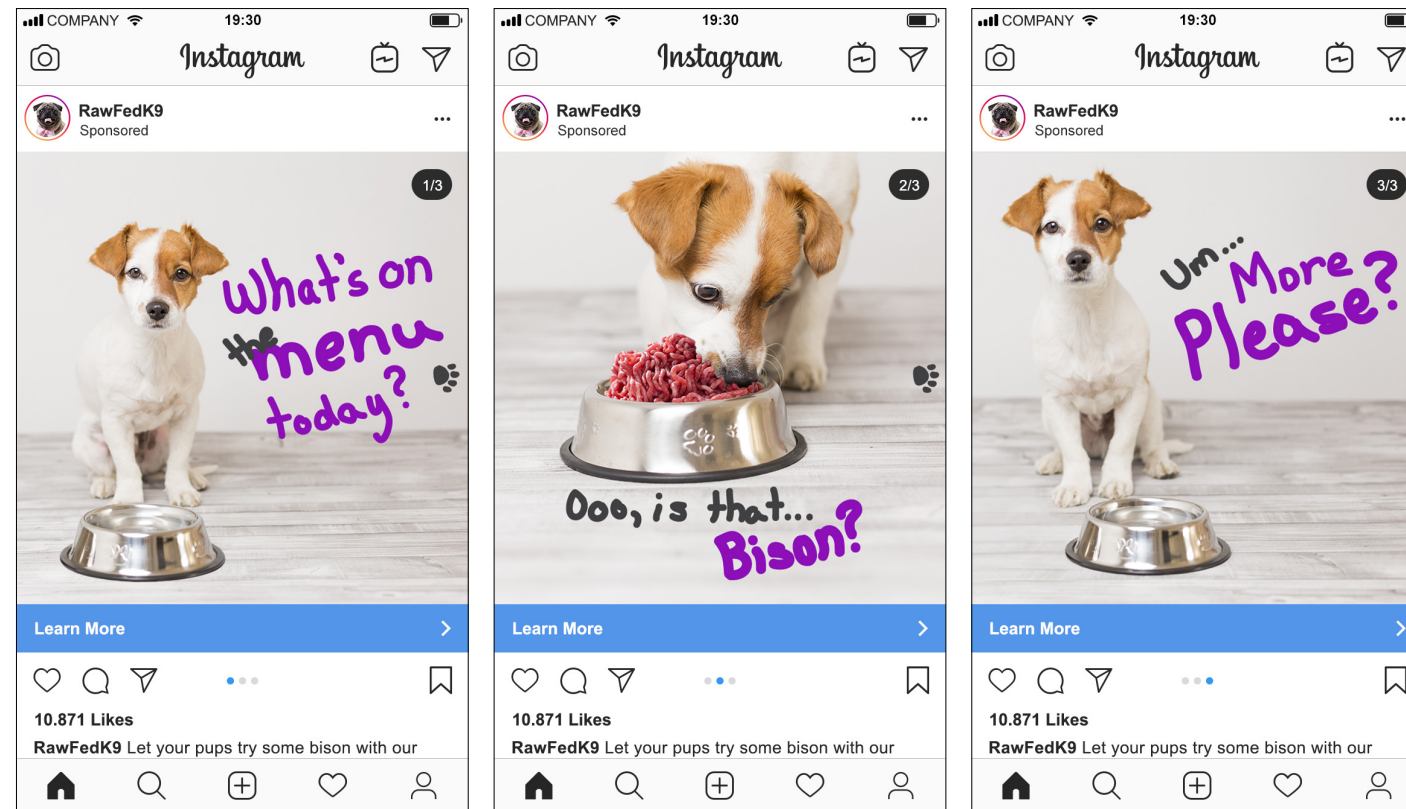

A quiet little home in the hills, where a stream babbles by and the sheep roam freely is where my heart belongs. Where the bagpipes play and echo over the hills is where I wish to stay.

If you hold a passion for hiking on cool summer days as the sheep peacefully munch nearby, then the Scottish Highlands just might be your heartland too. Come visit the hills today.

HighlandExplorerTours.com
(844) 888-0216

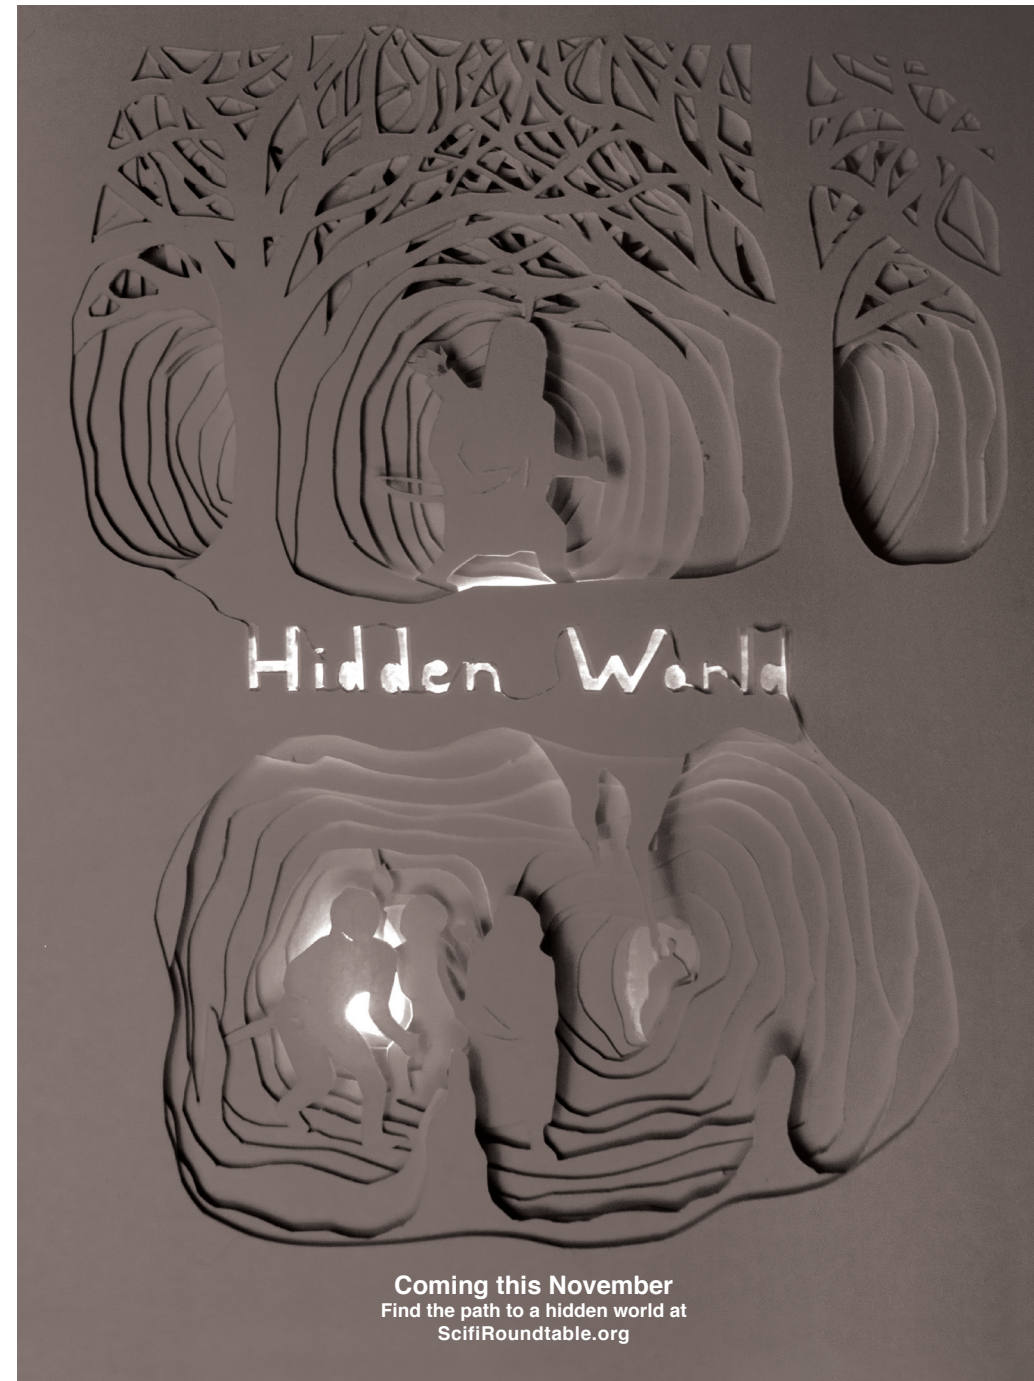

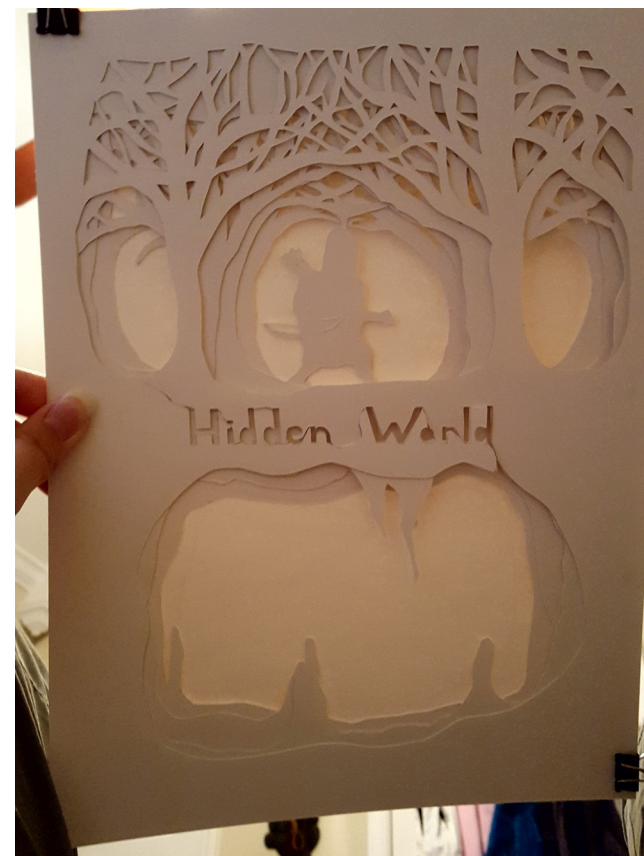

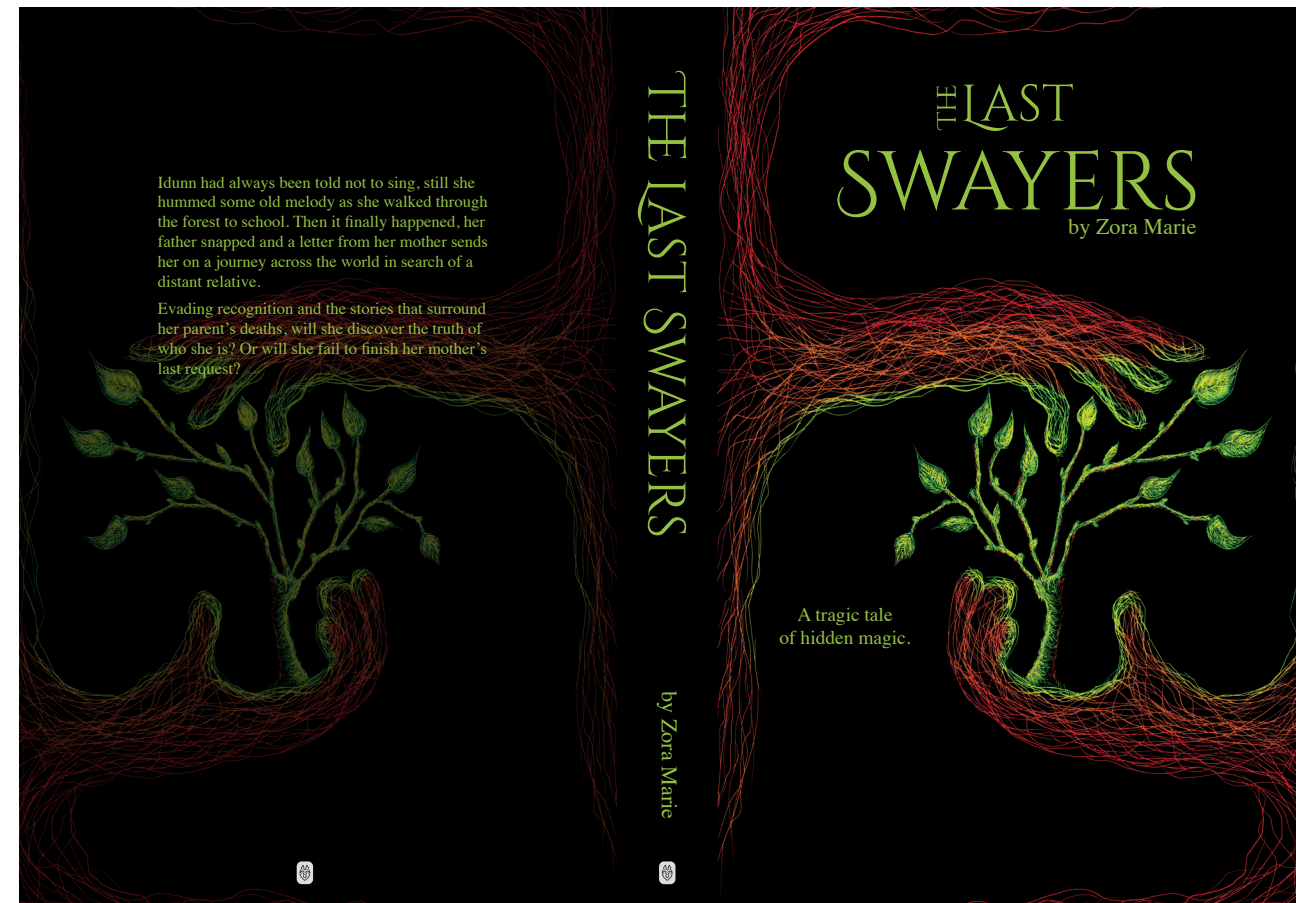

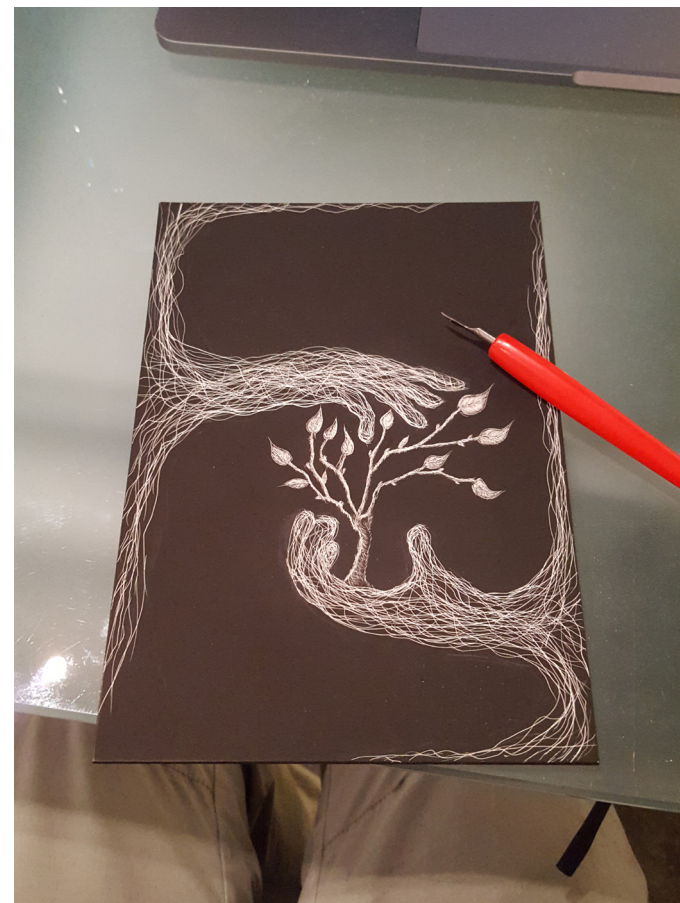

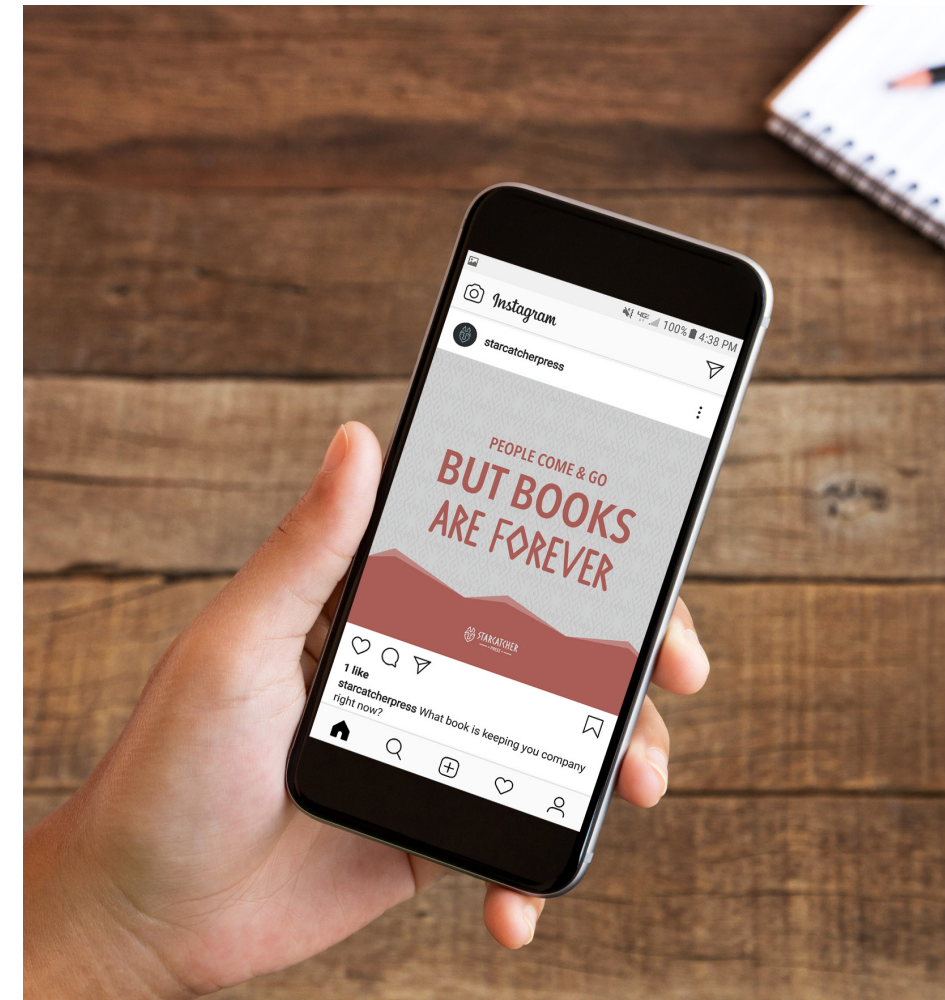

4G LTE 100% 3:37 PM

← Tweet

 Starcatcher Press
@StarcatcherPre1

People come & go, but books are forever. Do you have a favorite story you can't get enough of?
#greatreads #bookaddict

11:23 AM · 10 Mar 20 · Twitter Web App

2 Retweets 2 Likes

Tweet your reply

Thank You
for your time!

author@zoramarie.com
zoramarie.com